

Pasado, Pasado Perfecto & Pasado continuo

Susan had a party last week. She had invited all her friends to her house. She had invited her friends from work, her friends from university, and her friends from her neighborhood. The guests started arriving at around 7 o'clock for dinner.

Susan's best friend, Cindy, was there, wearing a red dress. And Susan's boyfriend, Tom, was wearing a blue suit and looked very handsome.

Cindy's boyfriend wasn't there, because he was travelling for business. He was negotiating a big contract in Sao Paolo that day. He had left the day before, and wouldn't be back for two more days.

Susan had made lasagna, which was very good. She had made enough lasagna for 30 people! She had also made salad and stuffed eggplant. Everything was delicious.

Her friends brought wine to the party. Everybody talked and drank wine and had a good time. While they were eating, they talked about their lives and about the political situation in their country.

Susan hadn't made anything for dessert, so they ate chocolate ice cream. It was delicious.
